

Fuel for Thought

Greetings from Amiens!

Don't I look French??????

As I mentioned last week, our regular columnist - QER's site Superintendent, Bruce Anderson - is on leave for a few weeks in Europe.

As if it wasn't bad enough that Bruce has left us all working here – now he's rubbing it in with his photos of fancy baguettes, fromage and champagne. He sent us the above shot from Amiens, France (site of one of the defining allied offensives in August 1918 which helped bring about the end of the First World War).

It's good to see Bruce soaking in the history and culture – but also not forgetting us - putting his exclusive, QER – Gladstone Ecofest library bag to good use, even though only as a makeshift tablecloth.

Bruce is one of the first people I met when I joined our project and I'm sure he'd hate me telling you this – while I've worked with really terrific people at QER – Bruce is one of the best. He is insightful, practical, humble, genuine, generous and a man of great integrity. (Don't tell him I said any of that).

I suppose, taking those things into account – he does deserve at least a little holiday. Hurry back though mate. We miss you!

Peter Zambelli

Director Corporate Affairs - QER

Creating new fuels for Australia

www.qer.com.au

Visitor Centre at 375 Landing Rd, Yarwun.

Open Weekdays 8am to 2pm. | Weekends, public holidays and other times by appointment – 0448 860 656.